

Rocky

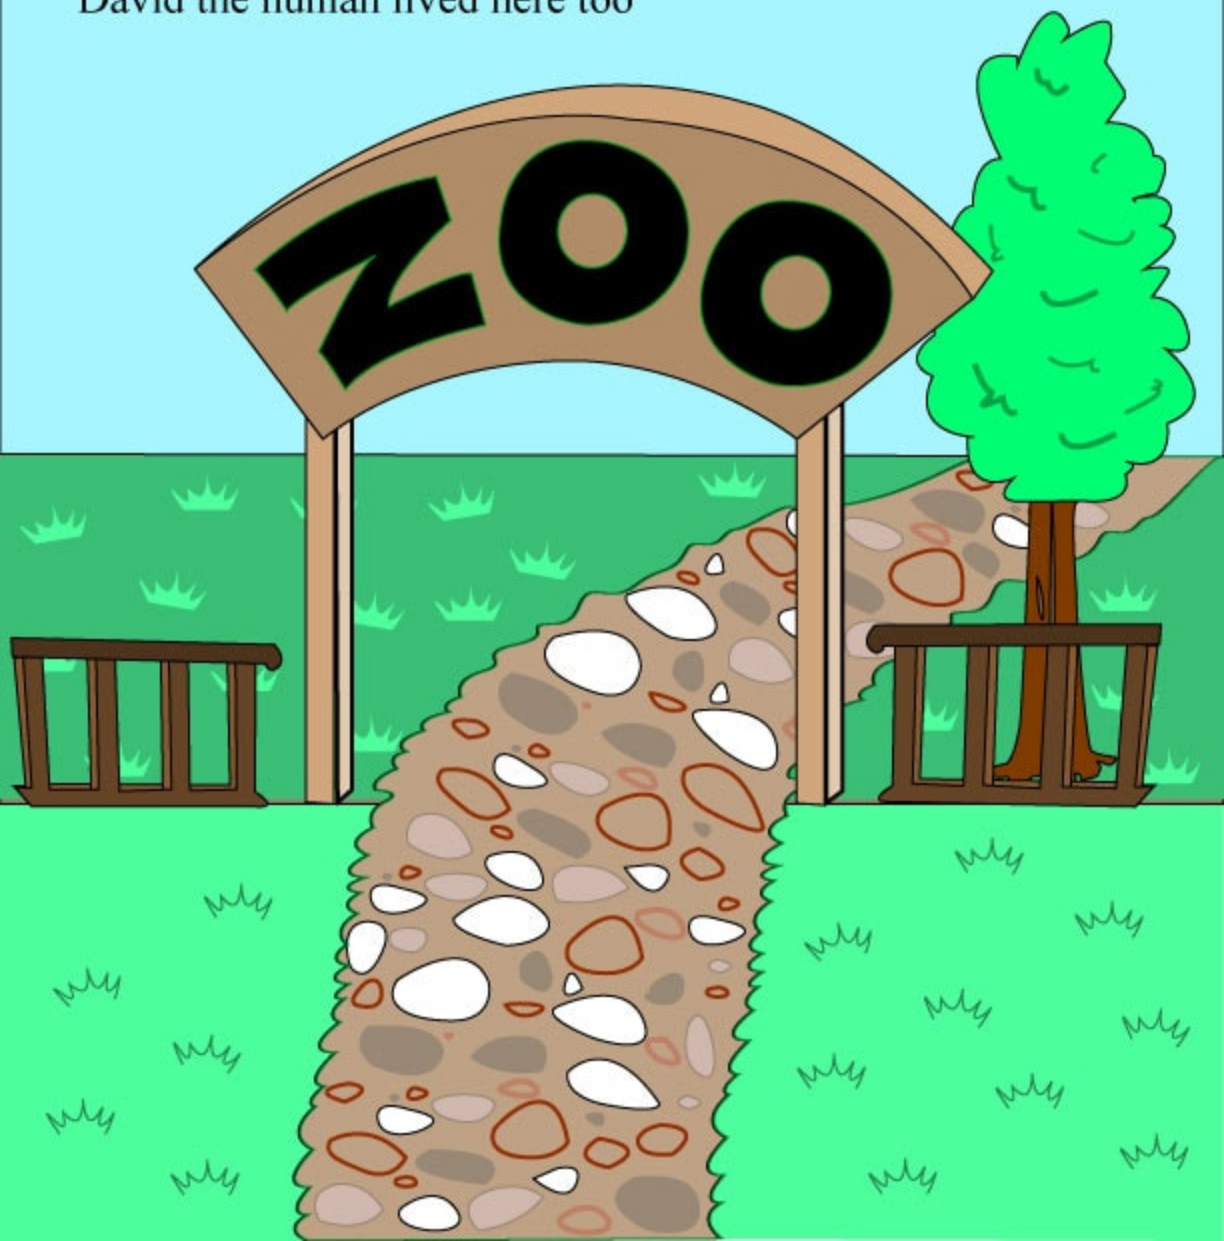

the Robot

By The Highlanders

In Rocky's town there was a ZOO

Where all the green grass grew

David the human lived here too

It was a horrid truth that no robot knew

That grass and all living things were becoming few

They wondered why dark and gloomy was the sky

But not a single robot asked why

Over the whole town there was a dark shade

They started to rust and fade

Little did they know the robots needed David's aid

David began to get sick

Rocky tried to be at David's side quick

But all the robots couldn't move on the land

The robots stopped with their wheels filled of sand

At last, David had an idea that was grand

David called the robots to the town square

He told them pollution was the problem in the air

Coughing and wheezing he continued his speech

But there was indeed a solution he needed to teach

Reuse, renew, and recycle he began to preach

You need to undo the problems you've done

First, the trash on the ground needs to be none

Next, plant new trees to keep the air clean

Water and sun will make the town green

Make nice paths to finish the scene

Put your gears together to make this work

I don't want things to go beserk

But take my advice to heart, or your problems will lurk

With these words being said Rocky turned to his friends

The robots needed to work before the world ends

They all agreed to pitch in a hand

They began to work on the land

Starting new paths, they swept away the sand

David got over his terrible flu

Soon the sky became blue

Their lives were no longer gray

These new changes were here to stay

They would all live happily one more day

Yay!
